SUGGESS-POWER

The Cool Head

Most of the people you know are level-headed and competent when their little worlds are wagging along in accustomed courses.

But let a storm come up-some emergency arise-and the one or two persons with cool heads will stand out like beacon lights at midnight. So rare is poise and judgment in a moment of stress.

You can build your character to meet these sudden demands for strength by practicing common sense and basing your daily conduct on the plans of action you know to be right. True balance will not come to you overnight-you must attain it. A level head and the ability to accept responsibility will make you immensely valuable to your friends, your
